

Dr. I-Shun Chen has been a veterinarian with Los Angeles Department of Animal Care and Control since 2010. After spending eight years in a private practice hospital for small animals in Las Vegas, he decided to pursue an internship at Iowa State University for Emergency Medicine/Critical Care, before moving to Los Angeles in 2008.

Dr. Chen obtained his DVM from Tuskegee University in 1999. Dr. Chen is currently a member of the American Veterinary Medical Association.

Dr. Chen has an enthusiastic attitude towards surgery related cases that will help to improve quality of life. Each animal is different and there is always some variance in their degree of challenge that makes the job worthwhile.

Dr. Chen is originally from Taiwan. He enjoys playing golf and spending time with his wife and three children Emily, Bryan, and Peter. He has a one eye dog named Snowball and a guppy named Red.
